

SYNOD OPENS ITS SESSIONS

Arrival of Noted Presbyterians From All Parts of the Country This Afternoon.

IMPORTANT CHURCH GATHERING

Will Be in Session Until Thursday Night--Many Questions of Importance To Come Up During the Meeting.

The Synod of the Presbyterian church of Wisconsin began its sessions at three o'clock this afternoon with holy communion and a sermon. The exercises and deliberations of the meetings will be held in the First Presbyterian church. Ten years ago a synod was held here and forty years ago another session was held in Janesville. The synod is the annual gathering of the one hundred and ninety-one Presbyterian churches in Wisconsin. Each church is entitled one elder. It is not expected that each church will be represented here this week but that fully a hundred and fifty delegates and pastors will be at the sessions opening tomorrow. The regular sessions opened this afternoon and the first session of the Women's synod will be held tomorrow morning at the city hall.

Notable Gathering
The present gathering is composed of the leading ministers of the Presbyterian church of Wisconsin. The opening sermon this afternoon was by Rev. C. A. Adams of Cranston. His theme was "Unoccupied Possessions," taken from Joshua xii, last clause. The administration of the Lord's supper at which Moder-

TESTIFIES AS TO PACKERS' RATES

Important Hearing Before the Inter
State Commerce Commission
Today.

[Special by Scripps-McLae.]
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 11.—Traffic Manager Shaine of the Erie railroad was before the interstate commerce commission on the investigation of the private refrigerator lines and testified that the private lines are paid 12 1/2 per cent commission on all freight obtained by them for shipment over certain roads. It is impossible for small dealers to compete with car owners. The independent ment packers are unable to compete with big packers for this reason.

TALK OF ROAD TO THE WEST NEXT

Madison Now Has Another Inerurban
Project Suggested to Its Citizens.

[Special to The Gazette.]
Madison, Wis., October 11.—Much interest is felt in this city in the proposed electric railway between Madison and Dubuque. The business men's association of Darlington is pushing the project with much vigor. The purpose of the new enterprise is to carry passengers and freight between the two cities. Darlington is 77 miles from here and the nearest railway communication is by 131 miles. The new road would reduce the distance between Madison and Arlington about one half.

WYNNE'S HONOR MAY BE SHORT

Report Is That He Is Merely Holding His Place Until Cortelyou Is Ready.

WILL RESIGN THE FIRST OF YEAR

First Assistant Postmaster General's Promotion May Be an Empty Honor--Considerable Talk About the Matter.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Following his formal appointment as Postmaster General by the President, Robert J. Wynne, acting Postmaster General since the death of Mr. Payne, took the oath of office at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The oath was administered by John J. Howley, chief clerk to the Assistant Postmaster General.

The appointment of Mr. Wynne as a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet was announced at the White House in the morning. To those in close touch with the situation the announcement was not unexpected. It was fully expected that in the event of Mr. Payne's death the President would designate Mr. Wynne acting Postmaster General for the reason that his duties as First Assistant Postmaster General made him familiar with the affairs of the department.

To Act for Cortelyou.
Two days after the death of Mr. Payne the President so designated Mr. Wynne, and to those of his friends to whom he talked confidentially of the subject he indicated his intention if there should be no change in the situation of naming him as Postmaster General until such time as George Bruce Cortelyou, chairman of the Republican national committee, could arrange his affairs to assume the duties of Postmaster General. In addition to other reasons, the President desired, by appointing Mr. Wynne, thus to seal with approval his conduct of the business of the First Assistant Postmaster General's office.

Mr. Wynne was appointed First Assistant Postmaster General on April 17, 1902. For nearly a quarter of a century he had been a Washington newspaper correspondent, serving at various times some of the most important newspapers in the country.

Term of Office Indefinite.
How long Mr. Wynne may continue as Postmaster General has not been determined. Beyond the statement that the appointment is temporary in character nothing is known. The probability is that he will be succeeded by Mr. Cortelyou about Jan. 1.

At present it is not believed that a successor to Mr. Wynne as first assistant will be appointed. He will continue to direct the business of that bureau with the assistance of the officials now in the department. When Mr. Cortelyou assumes the duties of Postmaster General Mr. Wynne again will undertake the business of the office of First Assistant Postmaster General.

BUILDING COLLAPSES KILLING HALF HUNDRED

Fifty Lives Are Destroyed When Walls of Structure in Course of Construction Yield to Pressure.

Sanlago, Chili, Oct. 11.—Fifty men were killed Monday and as many more severely injured by the collapse of the walls in course of erection for an extension of the Casa Pratones in this city.

Without the slightest warning the huge mass of iron and cement which had reached the fourth story fell, burying with it the hundred or more men who were working on the structure.

The force of the collapse was so great that it shook the ground for several blocks around and many people rushed into the streets thinking there was an earthquake.

The police arrived at the scene of the catastrophe a few minutes after the collapse and were assisted in their work of removing the dead and injured by the fire department. Many of the workmen phoned beneath the mass of building material were crying piteously for help when the rescuers began their work. Some frightfully mangled begged the police to shoot them and end their suffering.

The police and firemen have removed fifteen corpses and forty wounded from the ruins.
Feeling runs high in the city against the architect of the building. The people indignantly assert that he did not take sufficient precaution in planning the supports of the building. Some declare that he should be immediately brought to trial on a charge of manslaughter.

A barn belonging to Mrs. Laid of Butler was struck by lightning and destroyed. The loss will be about $1,000.
E. S. Andrews, convicted of embezzlement, was sentenced to eight months in the county jail at Oshkosh.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Oct. 11, 1864.—Blowing His Horn.—George B. Smith in his discussions with Mr. Sloan, takes a man along with him to write to the Patriot after each discussion "that it was a decided triumph for Mr. Smith." We conclude it must be for a gentleman in the city, who has been temporarily appointed freight agent at his place. He is a gentleman of long experience and decided ability in railroad work. He has been nominated by the Union men, of Fond du Lac county, as their candidate for sheriff, and we observe that the government speaks in the most flattering terms of his capabilities, not only for his duties with

HAD PROGRAM AND GAMES AT GRANGE

Annual Entertainment of La Prairie Grange and L. M. B. S. Had Many Amusing Features.

At Grange Hall on September 24 the La Prairie Grange and L. M. B. S. held their annual entertainment. About one hundred and fifty people sat down promptly at noon to an elaborate repast. Though the day was cloudy and threatening it was no dampener on the spirits of the gathering and all took great delight in the outdoor games which were immediately after dinner. Thorburn Reed and Willie Ullins were superintendents of the games and premiums of twenty-five cents each were given as follows: long jump, 18 or under, Tommy Coen; 200 yard dash, boys under 18, Tommie Coen; school marm's race, 100 yards, Miss Carrie McCartney; race for girls under 16, Clara Alvin; free for all for men, Francis Coen; free for all for ladies, Constance Woodman; free for all long jump, Willie Knipschield; free for all three legged race, John Conroy and Darby Coen; plectra-back for boys under 18, Fay Eddington and Floyd Yeomans; free for all running high jump, Willie Knipschield. Probably the most intensely exciting and interesting was the race for men over fifty; the contestants were Darby Coen and Herman Kellogg, the latter winning. This ended the outdoor sports and all gathered in the hall to hear the award of prizes for cooking. They were: chicken pie, 1st—Mrs. Nellie Sherman, $1, 2d—Mrs. Eliza Lloyd, 75c, 3d—Mrs. Leda Reeder, 50c, 4th—Mrs. Jessie Scott, 25c, 5th—Mrs. May Reeder, roast-ing-pig; best baked beans, 1st—Mrs. Stella McDaniel, 75c, 2d—Mrs. Olive Finch, 50c, 3d—Mrs. Louise Henry, 25c, 4th—Mrs. Nellie Sherman, 25c. A very handsome vase was awarded Miss Hemp for the prettiest bouquet of flowers and Mrs. May Kellogg 25 cents for the best floral design.

The program was opened by the Kellogg & Conroy orchestra. The first number was the award of prizes for the best recitation by young lady under twenty which was won by Miss Agnes Higgins with a dialect selection. A prize of 25 cents was given Harry Finch for being the best looking married man, the young ladies acting as judges. Miss Mae Buck of Dakota carried off the 25-cent prize for being the best looking young lady under twenty years of age. For the best looking woman over fifty Mrs. Alonzo Truesdale was awarded a prize of 25 cents. Miss Clara Schumacher was given the prize of 25 cents for being the best natured looking lady present. Mrs. Ella Rice won the 25-cent award for being the best looking married lady between the ages of 30 and 60. For his sweet smile, so the judges say, Fay Eddington won the 25-cent prize for being the best looking young man. The school teachers decided that Darby Coen was the best looking young man and he was given one of the 25-cent prizes. A prize was offered for the best waltzing married couple but for some reason none were willing to compete so 50 cents was offered for the best unmarried waltzing couple and the honors were carried off by Miss Effie Rice and Will Ullins. A most beautiful cheese plate was awarded Mrs. J. B. Humphrey for being the shortest married lady. Little Lida and Floy Caldwell spoke a cute little dialogue for which each were given a bouquet. Rhoda and Ruth Sherman sang two selections and were given the prize, 25 cents. Little Francis and Jessie Childs also sang in a very pleasing manner. Best recitation by girl between 10 and 12 was given to Lida Caldwell. Prize for best recitation by boy or girl between 12 and 14 was given to Master Russell Finch. Mrs. Hannah Barlass sang and whistled for which she received the prize given for best song by married lady. Last but not least was the singing by Mrs. Fanny Cummings. She delighted the audience and held their attention as she sang "My Mother's Beautiful Hands." Many thanks are due Kellogg & Conroy orchestra for the beautiful selections rendered during the entertainment and also to the committee on games and entertainment. The program ended and every one is already looking forward to another gala day in 1905.

SENATOR SPOONER.
The audience which listened to Senator Spooner's address last Saturday evening was impressed with the fact that the republican party is greater than any faction and its mission of more importance than personal ambition. The address was an earnest and impassioned appeal for principle and his discussion of state principles was on the broad plain of principles.

The function of government, in its three distinctive branches, executive, legislative and judicial, were clearly defined and the importance of keeping these branches distinctive, was as clearly set forth.

While but little reference was made to the governor except in an indirect way, enough was said to satisfy his audience that in the judgment of the senator the governor was assuming the right to perform the functions of both the executive and legislative branch, and that in doing so he was establishing a precedent that was dangerous to the welfare of the nation. This is a republican form of government, and the man who arrogates to himself the rights of a dictator is an enemy, however popular he may be as a leader.

This is the attitude which the governor has assumed and no one is better equipped to denounce it than Senator Spooner.

The legislator is the people's representative. With his colleagues he is supposed to make laws which shall conserve the best interests of the commonwealth. It is the mission of the judiciary to interpret these laws, and of the executive to enforce them. The fact is so well known that it has long since become obvious, that the present governor assumes the right to dictate to the legislature, and any man who opposes him is marked for defeat.

This policy, adopted by the governor, if carried out to its final conclusion, would undermine and destroy the best government ever created. The spirit that prompts it is the spirit of monarchy and if encouraged would establish a throne on free American soil.

The state of Wisconsin is having a touch of despotism and the good name of the state is already blighted by its influence.

editorial writers fresh from colleges, and universities, who know as little about the practical things of life as any class of men who were ever turned loose on an unsuspecting public.

To this class of writers, political economy according to text-books represents ideal government and reform leaders of the Bryan and La Follette stripe meet every requirement.

This is the sort of intellectual support which is back of the governor and coupled with the ignorance and prejudice of the masses, to which he appeals, it makes a following of peculiar conglomeration.

THE CROPS.
Henry Clows, the New York banker, reviews the situation in his last weekly letter which also contains the following satisfactory statement concerning the crops:

All doubt about the crops is now at an end, and this removes a very important restraint upon bullish enthusiasm. We are fully assured of an abundance of corn, and this, even if the expected 2,500,000,000 crop is not quite realized, is one of our most important sources of national prosperity.

We are sure also, of a big cotton crop, some estimates now reaching 12,000,000, and while early frost might cut off 100,000 to 200,000 bales, it could not do serious injury. Even the wheat crop is threatening out better than the crop. Killers were willing to let us believe, and in consequence of these developments the prices of corn, cotton and wheat are receding from the excessive high issues was on the broad plain of mandated.

It is now demonstrated beyond a doubt that American farmers—East, West and South—are to enjoy another prosperous year, which is the all-important fact in the business situation. They and their dependents form so large a proportion of our total population that good times with them mean better times for everybody—better times for merchants, better times for manufacturers, better times for transportation interests, and ultimately better times for the investor.

The unreasonably high prices for these three staples which lately prevailed were beneficial to no one except speculators, since producers did not secure these prices and consumers will not pay them very long. Their final effect would have been to injuriously check exports, and stimulate overproduction in the next crop. In fact the prosperity of the farmer and the country at large is best promoted when speculation acts simply as a balance wheel and is not devoted to creating destructive corners.

The recent decline, therefore, in wheat, cotton and corn are an encouraging feature. Without diminishing the profits of farmers, they will permit a revival of the natural outflow of domestic products and save us from an injurious derangement of our foreign trade, which would certainly occur if reckless grain and cotton operators had their way.

THE STATE SITUATION.
Conditions in the state have changed materially during the past week, and to the governor's advantage. The action of the supreme court is regarded as a victory for the third-termers and is being used by this element of the party for all it is worth. Following this comes the action of the national republican committee in endorsing the governor's state central committee to the extent at least of recognition.

While these new conditions have made no votes for the governor, and will detract nothing from the ranks of the men who have been opposing him, they impose upon the party new and grave responsibilities which must be met in a spirit of loyalty.

The attitude of the court, as well as the action of the committee, suggests that an effort to have the presidential electors placed upon the ticket headed by Scofield would doubtless result in failure.

In this event the national ticket would be in danger. This, of course, is of first consideration, and the leaders of the conservative element of the party will not hesitate to protect the national administration at any sacrifice.

have become important factors of modern industrial life.

Hearty recognition is given the far-reaching, beneficent work which has been accomplished through both corporations and unions.

There can be no real general prosperity unless based on the foundation of the prosperity of the wage-worker and the tiller of the soil.

Every man must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to do as he likes with his property or his labor, so long as he does not infringe the rights of others.—President Roosevelt.

The edict has gone forth from administration headquarters: "Beat Norcross for the assembly." Why? So that a democrat will be elected to vote against a republican candidate for the United States Senate? What kind of politics is that? You tell.

Senator Spooner was entitled to better treatment than he received at the hands of the national committee. The president is under some obligations to the senator and he can hardly afford to ignore them.

If the governor succeeds in carrying out his program the next legislature will be democratic, and if not permitted to have his way the national ticket may suffer. That's republicanism with a vengeance.

What does a Roosevelt-La Follette club stand for when it is under instructions to defeat republican nominees. That's a conundrum which is difficult to answer.

Hon. S. A. Cook has retired to private life with but little to show for his aspirations as a leader.

The democratic party can hardly be said to be conducting a campaign in Wisconsin.

PRESS COMMENT.
La Crosse Leader-Press: If editors generally had treated Henry C. Payne as kindly during his life as they are doing now, it would have been worth more.

Wausau Record: La Follette may of the state of Wisconsin has been and is being assailed by La Follette without even an offer of proof and it's up to the people to resent it.

Madison Journal: For the average Wisconsin voter the question remains after the decision as before, is it wise to continue Robert M. La Follette into a third term as governor of this state?

Kenosha Gazette: What a fine nest of "reformers" there is at Madison, to be sure, in all the history of Wisconsin there has not been so much skullduggery as has developed at the state capitol in the past four years of high and lofty purposes.

Wausau Record: La Follette may be able to get a certificate of regularity from the old state central committee, but those who heard him urge the voters of Wausau to put the knife into Andrew Kreutzer and Herman Miller will not have a very exalted idea of his regularity.

Sheboygan Journal: W. H. Burdette, a janitor in the Madison state capitol, has resigned because things are conducted in a haphazard way there. If things were not done in a haphazard way there wouldn't be need of janitors anywhere.

El Paso Herald: Between the competition of specially educated college men and the leveling down influence of the trades unions, discouraging promotion except for seniority, the chance of the laboring man to rise to the headship of his industrial undertakings purely on his merits is not nearly so good as it was in more primitive days.

Fond du Lac Reporter: One of the principal results of the present condition is the turning of stalwarts state ticket as furnishing their only hope of success. It remains to be seen whether they can deliver enough votes to defeat La Follette, and that depends on the votes of democrats. If the democratic vote is held for the ticket it will be elected.

ing to view the monument "erected to their memory." To many it will seem like a case of "tempting Providence."

INDIAN CASE BEFORE COURTS
Venerable Miami Seeks to Enforce Tax Exemption Treaty.

Wabash, Ind., Oct. 11.—In the Miami circuit court the suit of Gabriel Godfrey, the venerable Miami Indian, against the commissioners of Miami county to prevent the collection of taxes on the real estate belonging to him and other Indians in that and adjoining counties was reported. The contention of Godfrey is that under its treaty with the Miami the United States specially exempted the lands of the Miami from taxation, yet in spite of this the local authorities have regularly levied and collected the taxes. The commissioners aver that the Indians, having elected to exercise the right of suffrage, have lost the quality of wards of the nation.

BECOMES INSANE ON A TRAIN
Man Suddenly Opens Fusillade and Shoots Two Passengers.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 11.—Daniel Tulge of Chicago became suddenly deranged on a Pennsylvania passenger train near Warsaw, and, drawing a revolver, began shooting among the passengers. Carl Prekham, aged 15, and George Gault, aged 25, both of Monroeville, were hit by the flying bullets. Prekham was shot near the heart and will die. The man was overpowered by the trainmen and passengers and brought to Fort Wayne, where he was placed in jail.

Japanese Plates in Wreck.
Towner, N. D., Oct. 11.—A Great Northern freight train was wrecked at this place, the accident being caused by the breaking of a journal. The train was loaded with steel plates, which are parts of the consignments recently shipped from the East for Japanese warships.

STARR TALKS ON VARIOUS MATTERSTHE COUNTY CLERK ASSAILS
WHITEHEAD ON THE STUMP.

TALKS AGAINST REPUBLICANS

Republican County Official Steps
Outside the Pale of Republicanism.

Last night at Orfordville was witnessed the sight of the viper writhing in the bosom of the republican party turning and biting its benefactor. For eight years Frank P. Starr has held the office of county clerk, the gift of the republican party. Two years ago Mr. Starr begged renomination, promising he did not wish the office another term after the one he asked. His wish was granted. This last spring he again announced his candidacy for county clerk and was defeated by Howard Lee in the republican county convention by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Starr has taken his defeat to heart. In a speech last night at Orfordville he denounced the republican county convention of last May. He stated that he had a majority of votes of delegates at that time but that the minority controlled the convention and he was defeated. Speaking as a republican officeholder he denounced republican candidates for office in measured terms. During the twenty-five minutes' duration of his speech he managed to do as thoroughly blacken the character and actions of Senator Whitehead as possible, labelling him "liker," "bolter," "outside the party," and making the sensational statement that as county clerk he must place Senator Whitehead's name on the republican ticket, but he would like to place after it the words "liker bolter." As far as Mr. Starr knew, and he did not seem to know much, Senator Whitehead was a moral man. Then he proceeded to lambast the friend of former days by bringing up the rice bill, the cigarette bill, and told his hearers not to support him and to count him out. He was followed by another of the governor's spellbinders who was as bitter towards Senator Whitehead as was Mr. Starr. The only difference was that his instructions came directly from the governor and Mr. Starr's were the ramblings of a disappointed officeholder. Fred Minor of Milwaukee was the second speaker. He denied Senator Spooner's statement that the three fundamental principles of good government were legislative, executive and judicial and preached the socialistic doctrine of equality of all men. It was a socialistic speech in the extreme. Senators Spooner and Quarles came in for their share of abuse. It was a strange feature of the whole meeting that little or no enthusiasm was evident even when the Governor's name was mentioned. The effect of such a tirade upon the character of Senator Whitehead can not be reared upon the heads of the howling La Follette men, who took part in the nomination of Senator Whitehead, and now are knifing him to the heart.

Local Undertaker Represents Wisconsin in National Undertakers' Convention at St. Louis.

F. D. Kimball is this week attending the convention of the National Undertakers' association in St. Louis. He went as a delegate from the Wisconsin Association being elected in the state convention held at Oshkosh last month. This is quite an honor for the Janesville undertaker, being chosen from a large number of his profession, scattered throughout Wisconsin.

LITTLE GIRL MAY GO TO REFORMATORY

Twelve Year Old Elsie Sandstrom Stays Out Late Nights and Does Not Obey Father.

Little Elsie Sandstrom appeared in municipal court this morning to answer to charges preferred by her father, Fred Sandstrom, who lives on Riverside street, and her older sister, that she was incorrigible and should be sent to a reformatory school. The trio were all in tears as the hearing progressed, and it became evident that if Elsie was sent away at all it would have to be for nine years—that is, until she should reach the age of twenty-one. A probation period during which the accused will have an opportunity to mend her ways and obey her relatives was fixed and the case adjourned until next week Saturday.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 11.—Attorney General Hamlin has rendered an opinion that where two tickets for the legislature have been nominated in the same district by the same political party it is the duty of the county judges in the district in question to meet and to decide which are regular nominees, notwithstanding the nomination certificates of each candidate may appear to be regular.

HIGH HONOR FOR FORMER STUDENT

J. J. HOWLEY, WHO GRADUATED FROM VALENTINE SCHOOL,

ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GEN'L

Appointed to Place Made Vacant by Elevation of R. J. Wynne to Cabinet Position.

The appointment of John J. Howley as first assistant postmaster general vice R. J. Wynne, promoted to the postmaster general's office to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Henry C. Payne, is of especial interest to Janesville people inasmuch as he was a student here some years ago. Mr. Howley graduated from the Valentine School of Telegraphy about 1884 and soon thereafter assumed a position as telegraph operator for the Western Union Co. in Chicago. From thence he was transferred to New York and eventually he entered the government service. For the past three years he has been chief clerk of the first assistant postmaster general at Washington and has been considered by those competent to judge as one of the brightest men in the service. Mr. Howley came to Janesville to enter the School of Telegraphy from Brooklyn, New York.

NEARLY LOST HIS HAND ON A HOOK

Engineer of the Rock River Cotton Mills, Meets with Painful Accident.

Thomas Wallace, engineer at the Rock River Cotton company, met with a serious accident shortly after one o'clock this noon which may result in the amputation of his left hand at the wrist. As Mr. Wallace was about to start the engine at the close of the noon hour one of the two hooks on the engine near the governor failed to work properly and he reached up to start it. In some manner it caught in his left wrist, tearing the bones out and making a painful wound. Dr. Palmer was immediately summoned and took the injured man to the Palmer Memorial hospital. It was thought on examination that the wrist would have to be amputated.

Farmers' Rest Opens Saturday.

It is called the "Farmers' Rest," this new building of solid brick which D. C. French is just completing on North Franklin street, and "rest" for man and beast but more particularly perhaps for the beast. Within its spacious walls there is room for 94 straight hitches and box are lighted and ventilated with hundreds of windows in the day time and known to modern homes for horses is provided. The front portion of the building is two stories high and the second floor contains two sets of commodious flats, and a liberal use of mineral wool in the walls and floors cuts these off entirely from the rest of the structure. The office, the two main driveways, a commodious ladies' rest room provided with comfortable chairs, a wash-stand, running water, and all toilet accessories, and the harness shop are on the first floor. There is also a large room which will later be devoted to restaurant purposes. From the office windows command a view of the entire interior of the stables, so that a careful watch may be kept on all teams left in the keeping of the management. In addition to other conveniences there is an ample store-room for hedges, cutters, and automobiles. It is probable that in connection with this immense stable Mr. French will inaugurate a monthly livestock sale to be conducted on the same plan and under the same rules as those obtaining at all horse markets and the stockyards at Chicago. Only a nominal charge is to be made for the use of the accommodations and everything will be done to make it a comfortable and attractive place for visitors from without the city. One of the part of the employees, Mr. French conducted an enterprise of the kind in Rockford with great success and has profited by previous experience in building this one.

SPEAKER CANNON'S
GREAT WELCOME

Spoke at Madison Last Night—Greeted by Large Audience at Gymnasium.

Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, speaker of the house of representatives during the 58th congress, was the central figure of a large and enthusiastic republican rally at the university gymnasium at Madison last night at which Congressman Charles B. Landis of Indiana and J. Adam Bede of Minnesota also spoke. Madison people turned out en masse to hear the popular presiding officer of the house and in the great audience was sprinkled a large number of students. Seated on the speaker's platform were many notables irrespective of factional alignment.

"Uncle Joe" was introduced by Congressman H. C. Adams. The latter said in his speech of introduction:

Only Doubt as to Majority "I have seen in stated in many newspapers east and west, that Wisconsin is a doubtful state. That is true. We are in doubt as to whether Wisconsin will give Roosevelt 100,000 or 150,000 majority. The supreme court has decided which is the regular republican ticket and the republicans of this state will accept that decision. We are proud of our state. We are proud of its citizenship. I am not here to make a speech, but I am here to introduce to you one whom Wisconsin is glad to honor—the speaker of the house—one of the war-horses of the republican party."

Quells Hunger and Thirst.

In Peru is found a singular plant, capable of quelling hunger or thirst for several days. It is named erythroxylon coca. A decoction of one hundred grains of this plant produces this effect for forty-eight hours, the muscular energy being preserved. The plant appears to narcotize the nerves of the stomach and suspend the digestive functions, without affording nutriment.

HOME MADE BREAD

When you buy a loaf of bread of us for 4 cents you get not only the best bread made but have 1 cent more to keep in your own pocket. We give 5 leaves more for a dollar than you get elsewhere. After you have bought bread of us to the amount of 80 cts. you have had the exact number of loaves that your baker charges you one dollar for. Remember our price is 4c for a loaf of the best home made bread in Janesville.

Cocoanut buns; a lady took a seat in our store today to wait until the risen cocoanut buns came out of the oven, which we expected would be in a minute or two. Her disappointment was quite plainly to be seen when the report came in that so much extra bread and so many fried cakes had crowded out the buns for today. We will surely have risen cocoanut buns tomorrow, and will sell them at 10c a doz.

CHAPTER X.

It was a most awkward meeting. Dorothy, Train and Brendon knew the truth, but Mrs. Ward and Vane were ignorant. As to Lord Derrington himself, George was not sure. After his conversation with Lola he had a vague idea that, since Havelock was connected in some way with his grandfather, Lord Derrington must have somehow learned that Brendon was the name his grandson had taken. There was no other way of accounting for the mention of Derrington's name by the private detective.

However this might be, Lord Derrington was too clever a man to betray himself. George felt that the old man knew who he was, but he could not be sure, for Derrington welcomed him with a well bred air, as he would have done a stranger. Mrs. Ward watched the meeting curiously, and Brendon noticed her inquiring gaze, but he put this down to his knowledge that Derrington knew he was a suitor for Dorothy's hand and wished the girl to marry Vane. Leonard was the only person in the room who displayed any visible disturbance. He grew red and restless. Brendon was perfectly calm.

"How delightful of you to come, Mr. Brendon," said Mrs. Ward, rising and apparently forgetting that she had forbidden him the house. "I must introduce you. Lord Derrington—Mr. Brendon, and you know Mr. Train."

"We are old friends," said George calmly. "Miss Ward"—he bowed to Dorothy, who emitted his serenity, although she felt anxious. But when she saw her lover's composure she knew that nothing disagreeable would occur, and her apprehensions were relieved.

There ensued a general conversation relative to the weather, to the doings of a certain politician and to sundry other subjects more or less vague. George talked excellently and was conscious that Derrington was listening with approval. Again and again he wondered if the old man really knew who he was, and again and again he failed to arrive at any conclusion. After a time Leonard went with Dorothy to the piano, where she played for his delectation, and Mrs. Ward seized the opportunity to show Vane some new photographs of her-

"I have heard of you from Mrs. Ward," said Derrington and Brendon were practically alone, and the old lord appeared anxious to make himself agreeable.

"I have heard of you from Mrs. Ward," he said in his harsh tones.

Nerve Fag.

If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, and by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone to its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures, of people so sick that doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. I am now as healthy as a horse, and can sleep well, in fact have almost forgotten that I possess nervousness." D. L. BLY, Assistant Cashier, State Bank, Texas.

which no amount of politeness could render agreeable. "But I do not think we have met before. Are you related to the Brendons of Shropshire?"

"No, I have not that privilege," Derrington chuckled at this reply. He thought George had a good deal of the man in him when he answered thus fearlessly. "I have seen your name somewhere lately," he observed, "but I can't recall where or in what connection."

Brendon laughed, quite at his ease, although he did not know if this was an attempt to make him speak out. However, he did speak out, with the idea of seeing what would happen. "I can supply the connection," said he lightly, but keenly observant of the old man's face. "My name appeared as a witness at an inquest a week or so back."

"Ah, now I remember, Mr. Brendon. Quite so. It was that Amelia square murder."

"You have a good memory, Lord Derrington."

"In this case you flatter me, Mr. Brendon. There is no difficulty in my remembering the special case, as Mrs. Jersey was a tenant of mine."

George was not supposed to know this and displayed suitable surprise.

"Indeed," he said, "then you have lost a good tenant."

"Possibly," replied Derrington, rather grimly. "She always paid her rent regularly. You saw her?"

"Yes, my friend, Mr. Train, was stopping in the house."

"That young man," Derrington cast a look in Leonard's direction. "I did not know he was there on that night."

"He was a witness also," said Brendon significantly.

"I can't remember all the names, sir. Well."

"I stopped for the night with Mr. Train and during the night Mrs. Jersey was murdered."

"You heard nothing—saw nothing?"

"I was sound asleep the whole time," said Brendon calmly.

"Humph!" Derrington pulled at his gray moustache in the very same way as George did when he was reticent. "What a pity. You might have discovered the assassin."

"I don't think the assassin will ever be discovered."

"That's lucky for the assassin," rejoined the old lord cynically. "You appear to be very certain, Mr. Brendon."

George shrugged his shoulders. "No more certain than the police are," he replied. "They examined every one in the house, and no one could be accused—there was absolutely no evidence."

Derrington for some reason appeared to be rather relieved. "I read all that in the papers," he said roughly. "You are telling me nothing new. But there, you didn't say you would. By the way, do you know a Miss Bull?"

George nodded. "She told my fortune," he said.

"She told Mrs. Jersey's fortune also, and a very true fortune did she tell," said Derrington grimly. "What did she prophesy about you?"

"There were trouble and enemies and the promise that I should get my wish," said Brendon, with a quick look.

Derrington laughed. "What is your wish?"

"If I tell it I won't get it," replied George, also laughing, "but I don't believe in fortune telling. It is rubbish."

"It wasn't in Mrs. Jersey's case," said the other, who appeared to be a trifle superstitious.

"Oh, that was a mere coincidence. But you asked me about Miss Bull, sir. Do you know her?"

Derrington nodded. "She came to me on behalf of Mrs. Jersey's niece and wished the lease renewed. I heard her story and consented. I dare say the niece will be quite as good a tenant as the aunt."

This conversation was all very well, but there was nothing to be learned from it on either side. Brendon could not discover if his grandfather knew to whom he was speaking, and Derrington found it impossible to learn if George could tell him anything of the case which had not been reported in the papers. For some reason Derrington wished to know what had transpired, and Brendon felt convinced that this anxiety was more than that of a landlord for the loss of a good tenant. He wondered if Derrington knew that Mrs. Jersey had written out a confession and that it was missing. He would have liked to find out, but since he could not reveal himself as Derrington's grandson there was no chance of getting this information.

Besides, Derrington appeared to grow weary of discussing the murder. "It is worn threadbare," he said. "All the papers have been talking about it. I agree with you, Mr. Brendon, that the assassin will never be discovered. However, there are pleasant subjects to talk of. What about yourself—your aims, your ambitions, your chances of success?"

"Are those pleasant subjects?" laughed Brendon.

"To an old man such as I am," nodded the other, "I like to hear of the castles in the air which youth builds."

"I am afraid my castles will never turn to bricks and mortar," said Brendon, with a sigh.

However, he was not averse to showing his grandfather that he was no fool, but a man with a head on his shoulders. George had a quick brain and a strong will and a considerable fund of information. He had taken a good degree at Oxford, and his literary articles always received praise from the public and from his brethren of the press. Moreover, George was fond of politics and could converse excellently on that fascinating subject. He laid himself out to please Derrington, knowing that the old tyrant was disappointed in the languid Vane, who was chattering commonplace to Mrs. Ward. In a short time Brendon and Derrington were engaged in a discussion about Ireland and Irish home rule.

"You ought to be in the house, Mr. Brendon," said the old lord.

"I have no one to help me to such a goal."

Derrington was about to speak and fastened his little eyes on the keen, handsome face of the younger man, but he suddenly changed his mind and turned away to talk to Mrs. Ward. Brendon knew that he had succeeded in pleasing the old gentleman and was glad that so much was accomplished. If Derrington found that he was clever and prepossessing and likely to add lustre to the family name it was not improbable that he would recognize the marriage. But by this time George had it in his mind that Derrington knew who he was and had been talking adversely under the cover of pretended ignorance so as to see what manner of man his unacknowledged grandson was. "Well," thought Brendon, "he has learned that I am no fool, at all events."

Mrs. Ward came across to George and left Derrington talking to Dorothy, for whom he professed a great admiration. He knew that Dorothy liked Brendon, as Mrs. Ward had told him so, and he frankly acknowledged to her that Brendon was a clever man.

"I wish my grandson had his brains," said Derrington regretfully. "Do you like Brendon?"

Dorothy did not see why she should conceal her feelings. "I love him," she said quietly and firmly.

"Hm!" replied Derrington, showing no surprise. "Mrs. Ward hinted at something of that sort, but I thought that Walter—"

"Please say no more, Lord Derrington."

"Well, then, I won't," Derrington's eyes rested wistfully on the withered young man he called grandson. "I don't wonder at your choice, my dear. What Walter requires is a nurse."

"That is a profession I have not taken up," said Dorothy, laughing. Derrington said no more about Brendon, but Dorothy noticed that his eyes were rarely off the face of her lover.

Meantime Vane joined Mrs. Ward, and Dorothy, seeing that Leonard was alone, beckoned him to approach. Derrington was not particularly pleased at having his conversation with a pretty girl interrupted, but he was polite, and on learning that Train knew Brendon intimately, he began to ask him about his friend.

"But really, you know, she is a great artist," Mrs. Ward was saying to Brendon. "There is something so original about her."

They were speaking of Lola Velez, and it was Vane who had introduced the subject. George, to whom the subject was distasteful, tried to avoid the discussion, but Mrs. Ward would return again and again to the topic.

"They say you know her very well," she declared.

"I am not sorry to put you right on that point," replied Brendon, his eyes hardening. "Many false rumors are about, to one of which you alluded the other day, Mrs. Ward. This is another. What I know of Senora Velez and how I know her can be put in a nutshell."

And George quietly related his rescue of the dancer.

"Then you did make her the success she is?" cried Mrs. Ward when he ended. "Oh, yes, it's no use denying it. You picked a jewel out of the gutter and gave it a chance of shining."

"Perhaps I did that much. But she made a success by her genius."

"I hope she is grateful," murmured Vane, with a malicious smile.

Brendon turned on him sharply. "I don't know what you mean by gratitude," he said deliberately.

"Well," drawled the little dandy, "she is pretty and—"

"She is not at all pretty, Mr. Vane, and were she as lovely as Cleopatra it would not matter to me. My connection with her ceased when she made her success."

George quite forgot the presence of Mrs. Ward and spoke vehemently. "Can't you understand that a man may do a kind action without being blinded by the beauty of a woman?"

"Some men can," said Mrs. Ward politely, "and I am sure you are one, Mr. Brendon. But suppose the woman?"

"I don't suppose anything, Mrs. Ward. I know. Senora Velez was poor. I helped her to attain to the position she now holds because I endeavor to follow the preaching of Christ, and she is to me a grateful friend. There is no more and no less to be said, and, a trifle rattled, George turned on his heel to join Dorothy.

"Well, I'm sure," murmured Mrs. Ward, "in my own house too!"

Vane sniggered. "There must be something in it," he said. "She's too pretty."

So these two scandal mongers talked on, and George had only made matters worse by his explanation. However, he believed that he had nipped the scandal in the bud, and stroled into the next room with Dorothy to quiet his mind. Behind them they left Derrington talking to Train and rather enjoying himself.

"Do you think Lord Derrington knows who you are?" asked Dorothy as she and George seated themselves on a divan.

"I am not sure," replied George, who did not want to tell her what he knew. He should have to introduce the name of Lola Velez. "I have no idea that he does."

Dorothy shook her head. "I don't think so. If he knows you he must be aware that you know him, and about the relationship, and would not speak so freely. I think he is taken with you, George."

"Well, he has been nudging me through my fingers. I only hope that our chance meeting of tonight may bear fruit. What is Train doing here? Your mother only had him in her house once before, and she does not like him."

"I can't make out why she asked him," said Dorothy. "He is a dull young man, though harmless enough. But my mother made a point of asking him to dinner."

"Humph! I wonder what that's for," said Brendon, wrinkling his brows, for he knew well that Mrs. Ward did nothing without expecting an equivalent return. "Then he recollected her questions about the crime and wondered if she had invited Leonard, so as to pump him."

And that is what she was doing at the very moment. Almost as soon as the lovers had disappeared into the yellow hound, Lord Derrington had taken his departure. He insisted that Vane should accompany him home, and they left together.

This was an excellent opportunity to find out what Mrs. Ward wanted to know. Taking Leonard's arm, she led him to a chair some distance from the door of the bandbox.

"Now let us have a nice long talk, dear Mr. Train," she said. "We can renew our pleasant conversation."

"I don't think it was very pleasant," said Train unwillingly.

"What an unamiable thing to say!" "I mean to talk about crime."

"Is most amusing—I mean instructive. Oh, yes, I have read many of those novels—what do they call them?—detective novels. I have often thought how nice it would be if one could really try to find out who killed a person. Now, in this case, Mr. Train, I am sure you heard something or saw something."

"Upon my word, I neither saw nor heard," protested Leonard. "I was in bed all the time."

"But you must have heard the fall of the body or the shutting of the door as she—ah!" Mrs. Ward saw from the expression of Leonard's face that she had touched upon something. "You did hear?"

High Class Druggists AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or official names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation, or weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—Syrup of Figs—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

FATHER GAGS CHILDREN BEFORE KILLING THEM

Man Brooding Over Death of Wife Then Goes to Cemetery and Tries to End His Own Life.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 11.—Behuml Schnepf, a Bohemian, 41 years of age, living at 48 Congress street, took his two children, Emma and John, aged 4 and 3 years, respectively, into the cellar of their home and killed them by shooting them in the temple. The children had been gagged to prevent an outcry.

After killing his children Schnepf went to the cemetery where his wife, who died a year ago, is buried, and shot himself in the head. His wound is not believed to be fatal.

Besides shooting his children, Schnepf struck them on the head with a five-pound hammer. Schnepf has been ill for months, and has brooded over the death of his wife.

NORTH POLE BOAT IS DISABLED

Canadian Cruiser on Arctic Expedition Sighted in Distress.

St. John's, N. F., Oct. 11.—Fishing vessels returning from Labrador report having sighted a strange steamer, which appeared like a sealer, off Davis Inlet Tuesday. The steamer was apparently disabled. It is believed that she is the Canadian cruiser Arctic, formerly the Gauss, bound for Hudson bay, and that her engines are out of order. The cruiser Arctic was dispatched early this year by the Canadian government to proceed to the north, annex a number of arctic islands for the British crown, and then attempt to reach the north pole. She is commanded by Capt. Bernier.
